JAMES LEWIS – REMARKS BEFORE THE
MENLO PARK CITY COUNCIL
TUESDAY, MARCH 12, 2019

Mayor Mueller and Council Members:

I’m Jim Lewis this year’s President with the Menlo Park Historical Association.

In 5 days, on March 17th, the annual holiday known as St. Patrick’s Day will occur. This is especially significant in the City of Menlo Park as its Sister City is with Galway, Ireland. Galway is a city with a population of approx. 100,000 people, located on the west side of Ireland. It has a major university of approx. 18,000 students with links to Stanford. Hewlett Packard’s European Headquarters is also located in Galway.

The Menlo Park link with Galway began approx. 150 years ago when two immigrants from Galway traveled to Menlo Park and purchased a large ranch, located near El Camino Real and Ravenswood Avenue. They named the ranch Menlo Park as it reminded them of a village in Galway known as Menlo. At the entrance to the ranch, they constructed a large gate similar in appearance to one located near the Menlo Castle. This gate was constructed in 1864 and came down approx. 60 years later in 1922.

I’m please to inform you that a replica of this gate has recently been constructed on the corner of Ravenswood Avenue and Alma Street. This Sunday, March 17th, at 2 pm, a dedication and ribbon cutting is planned and each of you and the entire community are cordially invited to attend. This project has been underway for many years, following the vision and efforts of a Menlo Park citizen, Ernst Meissner.

Fast forward to year 2013, Menlo Park signed a Friendship Agreement with the Galway Mayor followed by a Sister City Agreement signed June 3, 2016, by former Mayor Richard Cline. Prior to this, in 1960 and later in 1980 Menlo Park connected with Galway, including a visit from former Mayor Peg Gunn. This year’s Mayor of Galway, Ireland is Niall McNelis. He would have liked to have been here today, but instead prepared a short video in his absence, which I’d now like to share.

(2 ½ minute video)

Thank you.

‘If I want to achieve anything, I hope it will be Galway as a special place to live’

BY KERMAN ANDREWS

Walking through Galway city centre with Niall McNells is something of a stop-start experience, albeit a most cordial nature. He seems to know every second person we pass, and given he has just been elected Mayor of Galway City, a lot of people want to wish him well. “I swear, these are not plants!” he jokes. “It’s not stag’s! But I have been flabbergasted by the amount of good will.”

McNells has been a city councillor for the Labour Party for close to a decade, and he believes his role is to be honest in representation of the city. He makes us sit for our interview on Tuesday morning. “It’s a sham to lower the city without the city respecting it and to respect the city, and it does open doors and give me an opportunity to highlight certain issues.”

‘Transportation problems are holding the city to ransom’

The Mayor believes the defining issues of his office will be the port, Connacht Station, and Galway Quay developments; the Galway city bypass and the re-pedestrianisation of Shop Street and accompanying sewer repair works. “In essence, Mayor McNells believes that without the controversial bypass, development in the city is impossible, making construction of the railway vital for the city’s future.”

“When we talk about the port, or any of the other developments, we tend to talk about the cost and transport,” he says. “It can take an hour and a half get from Knocknarea to Ballylaunon, and up to two hours sometimes; that’s madness when you can get from Galway to Dublin in two hours.”

Mayor McNells says the consultants have a plan ready to submit the new plans of the bypass, after which they will need to be approved by Transport Infrastructure Ireland and the Government, but he acknowledges there will be legal challenges, and “hardships for families” who will lose their homes as a cost of the bypass’s proposed route and resulting compulsory purchase orders. “But the city is being strangled by traffic congestion,” he argues. “We need to sort this out, nothing else, be it the Tuan Road and Duhill Road has issues; development on the round land in Ardcarn or the Galway City Transport Plan, which also has proposals for bus lanes and one way systems, will happen.”

Mayor McNells describes himself as a “progressive person,” but with the bypass such a long running, and deeply controversial proposal, it remains a difficult sell to the public. Some are deeply opposed to it, others have become cynical about whether or not it will ever be constructed.

“We need to communicate the positives of why the bypass needs to happen,” he says. “Transportation problems are holding the city to ransom. Yet, we absolutely need to get people changing their habits, and to start using public transport, buses, and cycling and walking to work. But there are always going to be people who blame the car to the practical choice, and to environmentalists I say, traffic congestion is seeing commuters stuck in their cars for much longer than they should, waiting for traffic to move, and all the while burning diesel and petrol – and none of that is good for the environment.”

“I often think we should erect a sign on Shop Street during the races showing a high heel with a red line through it, warning people not to wear high heels as they’ll get caught or the heel will break on the surface.”

In May, Irish Water announced major upgrade works would take place on the sewage systems on William Street, Shop Street, High Street, Cross Street, Augustine Street, and Flood Street to tackle storm water overflows, sewer issues, and sewer flooding. The €3 million project, in partnership with the Galway City Council, will be undertaken by O’Malley Contractors. The works are due to be carried out from July to October, with a second phase from January to July 2019. Where appropriate these works will take place at night time. There will also be no works on William Street, Shop Street High Street during July and August in order to avoid disruption during the peak tourism season, as well as December. No work will be carried out in December to avoid traffic congestion during the Christmas period.

Coupled with this, is the re-pedestrianisation of Shop Street, with its current surface which will need to be upgraded to allow for the upgrade works - replaced completely. According to the Mayor, the favoured replacement surface is asphalt. “I often think we should erect a sign on Shop Street during the races showing a high heel with a red line through it,” he says. “We need to make sure that the people, and transport issues sorted so they can get to work easily.”

Mayor McNells believes the port, Connacht Station, and Galway Quay developments, among others, are vital. “Without any development cannot be solely for office and retail space, but must also include accommodation - including social council accommodation.”

“The Crown Control site will meet a lot of accommodation needs, the Corrib Great Southern site has zoning for retail and accommodation, and the other sites before planning this year. It may also come before councillors. For the city to grow, we need to sell every bit of land we have, but not just office and retail, there has to be accommodation and social housing. We need to have that 20 per cent social housing mix.”

We also have an opportunity to grow the city, turn it around to face the sea. People want to move to Galway, but there is no point in creating big jobs if you don’t have accommodations to house the people, and transport issues sorted so they can get to work easily.”

Political observers (and cynics) will note that the Mayor’s duration in office lends him into the 2019 Local Elections, due to be held on May 23, and that he will also be/has been Mayor around the time of the Coimiré’s election, also expected next year, he is the Labour candidate for Galway West.

“We are using the posters twice,” he laughs. “Labour is re-building, but party branches have been re-established in NUI and GMIT, and I think we’re off the ‘cold step’ with the electorate. The party has a good organisation and machine in place, if an election was called tomorrow, we’d be ready for it.”

Referring to his term as ‘first citizen’ Mayor McNells says he wants his approach to have “the personal touch” and has no desire to “take himself too seriously.”

The city “needs to have an adult conversation” about drug abuse and if an injection centres should be come.

“If I want to achieve anything this year, I hope it will be Galway is a special place to live,” he says. “We have to create a caring society that is fair and wide, that somebody wants to go back to education, say, there are the supports to that. We need to have a living wage, more than a minimum wage.”

History of Menlo Gates

In the early 1850s, two young Irishmen, Dennis Oliver and Daniel McGlynn, acquired a large tract of land on the west side of County Road (today's El Camino Real) with the goal of raising cattle for the San Francisco market. Oliver remarks in his diary that because the landscape reminded him of the village of Menlo, “...a lovely place on the banks of Lough Corrib two miles from the Town of Galway...” where he grew up, he named the ranch Menlo Park. In 1855 a gate at the entrance to the ranch was completed with the name Menlo Park across the top. A decade later, when the San Francisco and San Jose Railroad was built, it was decided to put a stop near the San Francisquito Creek and name the station after the nearby ranch. Initially the entire area between Redwood City and the creek and between the bay and the foothills was known as Menlo Park. Wealthy San Franciscans built their summer homes in the northern part (incorporated as Atherton in 1923), while the workers’ village that grew up around the train station was incorporated in 1927 as Menlo Park. The Gates themselves survived numerous storms as well as the era of Camp Fremont, but in 1922 were destroyed by “a speeding automobile filled with singing passengers.”

Galway, Ireland, which now includes the Village of Menlo, and the City of Menlo Park, California, signed a Friendship Agreement in 2013, and became Sister Cities in 2015.
