Organization’s Qualifications and Experience

Peninsula Conflict Resolution Center, incorporated as a nonprofit organization in 1986 is located at 1670 South Amphlett, Ste. 115, San Mateo, CA. 94402.

The Peninsula Conflict Resolution Center is a dispute resolution and communications center founded in 1986 to empower individuals, build relationships, and reduce violence through our core competencies of conflict resolution, facilitative processes and training. While PCRC’s origins are in conflict resolution, today we have broadened our scope and we now define our work as building the capacity of individuals, groups, and institutions, to work collaboratively and strengthen their communities. We currently apply our core competencies to assist with conflict resolution, communication and problem solving, and the facilitation of conversations and meetings in a wide variety of situations. PCRC also trains people in the same skills our expert facilitators and mediators master such as effective communication, creative problem solving, facilitation of effective meetings and designing successful group processes among many others.

PCRC services trainings on communication, conflict resolution and facilitative processes are sought out by multiple agencies across the County every year. PCRC has trained public institutions such as the Redwood City Police Department Citizens Police Academy, Redwood City Public Works and Revenue Services, Redwood City Parks, Recreation and Community Services, the County Consortium, The County library staff, and the City of East Palo Alto Code Enforcement Department. We have also conducted trainings for the City of Fairfield and the County of San Mateo. PCRC also trains other non-profits and our clients have included county-based organizations such as CORA and Edgwood Family Services. PCRC also provides on-on-one conflict coaching sessions to nonprofit executives, city and county government leaders, school district administrators, college faculty and small business owners.

Our organizational core competences along with our solid experience providing communication, conflict resolution and facilitative processes training to community organizations, schools, governments and other entities in the county makes us the best organization to provide training in some of the subject areas of the Employee Development Training Program.

1. Organizational Capacity

PCRC is best suited to provide these services because we have been the leading provider of conflict resolution and facilitation training for over 30 years. Our 25 staff, over 250 volunteers and 9 board members represent a diverse composition, reflective of the diversity of our county. Our training staff has ample experience in the design and delivery of high-quality, customized, communication, conflict resolution and facilitative processes training.

The principal project manager who will have continued responsibility for the project is Malissa Netane-Jones. Malissa, together with her team (see resumes attached) will ensure the day-to-day running of the project until its completion.
